

Spring 2019 – Makerspace Meeting Invitation

Hello Campus Community,

I would like to invite everyone on campus to our continuing conversation on the feasibility of a campus wide Makerspace.

The next meeting will occur on February 28 in room 2450 from 2-4pm.

In the Fall, we met together to discuss and measure interest, consider our strengths, identify any weaknesses, consider all the opportunities as well as discuss threats to success. We also toured existing spaces on campus where maker activities currently exist.

On the 28th we are planning to build on this work, continue and expand the discussion, as well as discuss a future field trip to some local vibrant academic maker spaces. We will also be looking at the role of entrepreneurship in an academic makerspace and how it might support student business startup activities.

In the fall we had a great turnout and interest from all constituent groups on campus, students, classified professionals, faculty and administrators. We are looking for just as many or more campus community members.

We hope to see you on February 28th to continue this important conversation focused on making a great hub of student activity, a campus wide Makerspace @LPC!

If you have any questions or comments, please reach out to myself or Vicki Shipman.

Have a great day, thanks for your consideration.
