Happy New Year!

"We will open the book. Its pages are blank. We are going to put words on them ourselves. The book is called Opportunity and its first chapter is New Year's Day." — Edith Lovejoy Pierce

2017 Ushers in New Programs and Classes

LPC wishes you a very Happy New Year! We kick off 2017 with more opportunities for students—offerings which drive economic development, build a strong workforce for our region, educate the whole student, and promote sustainability in our community. Following is a sampling of new programs and classes; please visit the website and class schedule for details.

Computer Information Technologist Program. LPC developed this new program developed in partnership with industry partners and local national labs, including Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. With an emphasis on work experience and internships, the program prepares students to become entry level IT professionals.

Occupational Safety and Health Program. CLPCCD's OSHA Training Center has partnered with LPC and its Occupational Safety and Health advisory committee to create an online certificate and degree program for working students in the safety field. The program trains professionals to protect people, property, and the environment and creates career pathways leading to employment and/or transfer to four-year degree programs.

Tenio DeCuerdas Eskrima. This introductory course of the Filipino martial art system focuses on the history of the system, basic movement and striking, increasing hand speed, defenses, and how to receive techniques safely.

Sustainable Landscape. Our Horticulture program developed this course in response to community demand. The course emphasizes constructing drought tolerant landscapes that are low maintenance, attractive, and successful.

Horticulture student Michael Severein tends sustainable landscaping which students installed last year near the Veterans Resource Center. The Horticulture Program is planning three more sustainable campus projects this spring.

Fire Service Coordinator Honored with Award

LPC's Fire Service Technology program and faculty enjoy a reputation for excellence throughout the state and beyond. President Russell commends two faculty members for their recent service to others in the line of duty. Program Coordinator and San Francisco Fire Department Lieutenant Ron Johansen saved a young man's life and Instructor and Oakland Fire Department Lieutenant George Freelen was a first responder at the tragic "Ghost Ship" fire in Oakland last month.

Meritorious Conduct Award

Lt. Johansen was among the San Francisco firefighters monitoring demolition of the old Bay Bridge last year when one of them glimpsed a splash in the water. Even though they thought it was probably just a sea lion, firefighters immediately investigated.

What they found was a young man who had just jumped from the new bridge and was drowning. Under difficult conditions, Lt. Johansen administered emergency aid to the struggling young man and saved his life. The young man later thanked his rescuers, said he was getting the help he needed, and felt very lucky to be alive.

For his lifesaving role in this rescue, Lt. Johansen was recently presented with a SFFD Meritorious Conduct

Award, posing a new challenge for the much-decorated Lt. Johansen—finding space for it on his already crowded office walls.

This is Lt. Johansen's fifth Meritorious Conduct Award and he has been named Firefighter of the Year five times as well. Among the many awards, recognitions, and mementos covering his walls, one of his most treasured is a 1977 letter commending him for his very first rescue.

The letter is from Chabot College's revered founding President and Superintendent Reed L. Buffington, Ed.D. As he was swimming laps in the pool at Chabot, where he was a student, the young Johansen saw a body at the bottom of the pool. Thanks to his expertise and quick action, he saved the life of the young woman—who coincidentally has the same last name, but is not related.

Since that fateful day in the pool, Lt. Johansen has saved many lives and fought every major fire in the area—from Yosemite to the Oakland Tunnel Fire. He and LPC's other Fire Service faculty share their hard won, invaluable experience with their students who go on to serve our community, our state, our nation, and even foreign countries.

Student Success

Ron Johansen's favorite topic of conversation is his students' success. He estimates that 50 to 70 percent of all new hires at the local fire departments within the last 10 years have been LPC graduates. Our alums also serve in many states, including Washington, Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, Texas, Colorado, Idaho, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina, and New York, in NYFD. Additionally, two alums now serve in Spain and one is in Sweden.

"We're very proud that we have such a high success rate for our students," Lt. Johansen said. But, he's most proud of the values students cultivate at LPC. "So many of our students believe that to be a firefighter is to be able to give themselves to others—their blood, their sweat, their hard work, and their tears. Our students volunteer for so many different events, for so many service agencies and groups. These students develop a value system of giving, to sacrifice themselves for others, and that's what matters most in life."

Fire Service Technology Program Coordinator Ron Johansen is surrounded by some of his students. All 44 of his first-year students have landed students positions as explorers at local fire departments, including the Livermore-Pleasanton and Alameda County fire departments. In terms of vehicles, the program has its own fire department: command vehicles, type three ambulance, light rescue unit, 85-foot tower ladder truck, and a type three fire engine—one of the few in the state—in high demand for its use in wildland fires.

EMS News: Recruitment, Prep Class, Award

Recertification Class. This semester, LPC's Emergency Medical Technician Program is offering an EMT Recertification Class, EMS 91, which is highly recommended for applicants to the fall 2017 Paramedic Training Program.

Alumni Award. Last month, Emergency Medical Technician alumna Jennifer Henson received the EMS Professional of the Year Award for Alameda County. Daughter of Math Instructor Teresa Dern Henson, Ms. Henson also graduated with an associate degree in Biology, Allied Health emphasis. LPC congratulates Ms. Henson on her prestigious award!

Talk Hawks Capture First Place, Again

The indomitable Talk Hawks did it again! They kept their winning streak alive by capturing first place in a recent speech competition—winning by a wide margin: 170.5 points versus 69 points by the second-place team,

CSU Chico. LPC's Talk Hawks competed with teams from 14 two- and four-year colleges. Their next tournament will be at Chabot College on February 3.

Christopher Hartwell

During student recitals last month, Daniel Le and Celia Reddoch perform "What You Mean to Me" from the Broadway musical Finding Neverland.

Music Makes Month Merry

LPC's Music Program treated the campus and community to lots of musical merry making for the holidays. In December, students presented recitals, roving carolers spread the holiday spirit on campus, and all of the ensembles collaborated in a Holiday Concert. The concert featured the Chamber Orchestra, Jazz Band, "Vocal East" Jazz Ensemble, Jazz Combos, and Chamber Choir performing many holiday favorites, new student compositions, a rousing audience sing-along, and the final joyous "Hallelujah" chorus. Congratulations to the music students and faculty on this spectacular concert!

H.O.T.T. Olive Oil Heats Up Profits

LPC's Horticulture Program enjoyed an excellent olive harvest this year. The Tuscan style extra virgin olive oil, produced by the club Horticulturalists of Today and Tomorrow (H.O.T.T.), sold out last month and raised $700, which will support next year's olive production, club activities, and materials to renovate several landscapes at LPC. The beautiful bottle labeling and packaging is courtesy of LPC's Viticulture and Winery Technology Program.
